The family patriarch, Abdullah, was born in Yemen in the early 1900s. He grew up in a time of great turmoil, as Yemen was torn apart by civil war. As a young man, Abdullah fled his homeland and made his way to America. He settled in New York City, where he worked as a peddler. In 1924, he married a fellow Yemeni immigrant, Fatima. Together, they had four children.

Abdullah and Fatima worked hard to build a new life for themselves and their family. In 1932, they opened a small grocery store in Brooklyn. The store was a success, and over the years, the family expanded their business to include several other stores. Abdullah and Fatima were also active in their community. They were involved in various charities and helped to support other immigrants from Yemen.

The family's story is one of perseverance and triumph. They overcame many obstacles to build a successful life in America. They also gave back to their community, helping others who were in need. An Arabian Family in the American Century is a truly inspiring story that will stay with you long after you finish reading it.
