The Story of Coyote Rides the Sun

Once upon a time, there was a great darkness. The people lived in fear, and they did not know what to do. They prayed to the gods for help, but the gods did not answer. Finally, Coyote came to the people and said, "I will bring you the sun."

Coyote set out on a journey to find the sun. He traveled for many days and nights, and he finally came to the place where the sun lived. The sun was a great, fiery ball, and it was too hot for Coyote to approach.

Coyote thought for a moment, and then he had an idea. He took a piece of yucca and made a long pole. He then dipped the pole into the water and held it up to the sun. The sun's rays reflected off the pole and into Coyote's eyes.

Coyote was blinded by the sun's rays, but he did not give up. He kept holding the pole up to the sun, and finally, the sun began to move. The sun moved closer and closer to the earth, and soon it was shining brightly in the sky.

The people were overjoyed. They thanked Coyote for bringing them the sun, and they celebrated with a great feast. Coyote was a hero, and he was always remembered as the one who brought the sun to the people.
