

Derived And Translated From The Writings Of Pierre Esprit Radisson

By Grace Lee Nute

Derived And Translated From The Writings Of Pierre Esprit Radisson is a fascinating and comprehensive account of the life and adventures of the French explorer. Born in France in 1636, Radisson spent his early years in the fur trade. In 1659, he joined the Hudson's Bay Company and spent the next several years exploring the vast wilderness of North America. He was one of the first Europeans to travel extensively in the region, and his writings provide a valuable firsthand account of the people and places he encountered.

Radisson was a skilled observer and a gifted writer. His journals are full of vivid descriptions of the Native American tribes he met, the animals he hunted, and the hardships he endured. He also recorded his thoughts on the fur trade and the political and economic struggles of the time. His writings are a valuable source of information for historians and scholars, and they continue to be enjoyed by general readers today.

Nute's translation of Radisson's writings is clear and accurate, and she provides extensive annotations that help to explain the historical context of the events described. This volume is an essential addition to the library of anyone interested in the history of North America or the fur trade.
