

Surfing in Morocco, Western Sahara, Senegal, Cape Verde, Liberia, Ivory Coast, Ghana: A Surfer's Guide

West Africa is a vast and diverse region, with a coastline that stretches for thousands of miles. From the windswept shores of Morocco to the lush tropical islands of Cape Verde, there are waves to be found for surfers of all levels.

The Stormrider Surf Guide Africa: Surfing in Morocco, Western Sahara, Senegal, Cape Verde, Liberia, Ivory Coast, Ghana, Sao Tome, Gabon, Angola, Namibia, ... Kenya and More (Stormrider Surfing Guides)

by Bruce Sutherland

★★★★☆ 4.4 out of 5

Language : English
File size : 22870 KB
Text-to-Speech : Enabled
Enhanced typesetting : Enabled
Print length : 215 pages
Lending : Enabled
Screen Reader : Supported

In this guide, we'll take a look at some of the best surf spots in West Africa, as well as provide information on when to go, what to expect, and how to get there.

Morocco

Morocco is one of the most popular surf destinations in West Africa, and for good reason. The country has a long coastline with a variety of different waves, from mellow beach breaks to powerful point breaks.

Some of the best surf spots in Morocco include:

- Taghazout: A world-renowned surf town with a variety of different breaks to choose from.
- Essaouira: A historic city with a beautiful beach break that's perfect for beginners.
- Dakhla: A remote town in the south of Morocco with some of the best waves in the country.

The best time to surf in Morocco is from October to April, when the waves are at their biggest and most consistent.

Western Sahara

Western Sahara is a disputed territory that lies between Morocco and Mauritania. The region has a long coastline with a number of different surf spots, but it is not as well-developed as Morocco.

Some of the best surf spots in Western Sahara include:

- Dakhla: A remote town with some of the best waves in the region.
- El Aaiún: The capital of Western Sahara, with a number of different surf spots to choose from.
- Smara: A small town in the south of Western Sahara with a few good surf breaks.

The best time to surf in Western Sahara is from October to April, when the waves are at their biggest and most consistent.

Senegal

Senegal is a country in West Africa with a long coastline and a number of different surf spots. The waves in Senegal are generally smaller than those in Morocco, but they are still ideal for beginners and intermediate surfers.

Some of the best surf spots in Senegal include:

- Dakar: The capital of Senegal, with a number of different surf spots to choose from.
- Yoff: A small town just south of Dakar with a few good surf breaks.
- Saly: A popular tourist destination with a number of different surf spots to choose from.

The best time to surf in Senegal is from October to April, when the waves are at their biggest and most consistent.

Cape Verde

Cape Verde is an archipelago of islands located off the coast of West Africa. The islands have a number of different surf spots, from mellow beach breaks to powerful point breaks.

Some of the best surf spots in Cape Verde include:

- Sal: The most popular tourist destination in Cape Verde, with a number of different surf spots to choose from.

- Boa Vista: A less-developed island with a number of different surf spots to choose from.
- Santo Antão: A mountainous island with a few good surf breaks.

The best time to surf in Cape Verde is from October to April, when the waves are at their biggest and most consistent.

Liberia

Liberia is a country in West Africa with a long coastline and a number of different surf spots. The waves in Liberia are generally smaller than those in Morocco, but they are still ideal for beginners and intermediate surfers.

Some of the best surf spots in Liberia include:

- Monrovia: The capital of Liberia, with a number of different surf spots to choose from.
- Robertsport: A popular tourist destination with a number of different surf spots to choose from.
- Grand Bassa: A less-developed area with a few good surf breaks.

The best time to surf in Liberia is from October to April, when the waves are at their biggest and most consistent.

Ivory Coast

Ivory Coast is a country in West Africa with a long coastline and a number of different surf spots. The waves in Ivory Coast are generally smaller than those in Morocco, but they are still ideal for beginners and intermediate surfers.

Some of the best surf spots in Ivory Coast include:

- Abidjan: The capital of Ivory Coast, with a number of different surf spots to choose from.
- Assinie: A popular tourist destination with a number of different surf spots to choose from.
- Grand-Bassam: A historic city with a few good surf breaks.

The best time to surf in Ivory Coast is from October to April, when the waves are at their biggest and most consistent.

Ghana

Ghana is a country in West Africa with a long coastline and a number of different surf spots. The waves in Ghana are generally smaller than those in Morocco, but they are still ideal for beginners and intermediate surfers.

Some of the best surf spots in Ghana include:

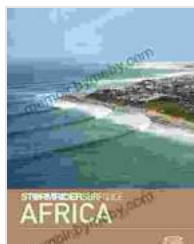

- Accra: The capital of Ghana, with a number of different surf spots to choose from.
- Takoradi: A popular tourist destination with a number of different surf spots to choose from.
- Cape Three Points: A remote area with a few good surf breaks.

The best time to surf in Ghana is from October to April, when the waves are at their biggest and most consistent.

Planning Your Trip

If you're planning a surf trip to West Africa, here are a few things to keep in mind:

* The best time to surf in West Africa is

The Stormrider Surf Guide Africa: Surfing in Morocco, Western Sahara, Senegal, Cape Verde, Liberia, Ivory Coast, Ghana, Sao Tome, Gabon, Angola, Namibia, ... Kenya and More (Stormrider Surfing Guides)

by Bruce Sutherland

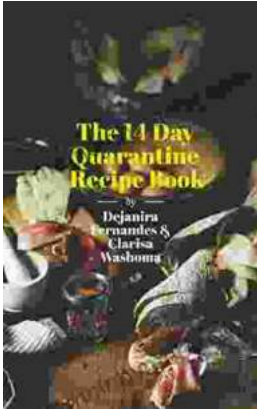

★★★★☆ 4.4 out of 5

Language : English
File size : 22870 KB
Text-to-Speech : Enabled
Enhanced typesetting : Enabled
Print length : 215 pages
Lending : Enabled
Screen Reader : Supported

Sky Island Trot Cap Bill Adventure: A Captivating Tale for Children of All Ages

Prepare yourself for an extraordinary adventure that will ignite your imagination and transport you to a world beyond your wildest dreams....

The 14 Day Quarantine Recipe: A Culinary Adventure During Isolation

In these extraordinary times of quarantine, where many of us find ourselves confined within the walls of our homes, cooking has emerged as a...